

You have already ruined it. There was nothing unreasonable about the limits of five stations per type, except to the greedy and power-hungry. This conglomeration that has been going on is about as un-american as you can get. "Freedom of the Press belongs to the man who owns one" according to William Randolph Hearst, who played public opinion like a violin. With the inherent limitations on the number of broadcast outlets, by allowing mega-ownership you have effectively destroyed that freedom.
